How to achieve an NPORS Operator Card

The achievement of an NPORS Operator Card is a straightforward process as outlined below. The process is designed to ensure that candidates follow the correct path to achievement, but at the same time offering employers a credible, flexible and cost effective alternative plant operator card.

Training

NPORS training and testing is conducted in accordance with published course objectives and learning outcomes which are derived from the National Occupational Standards. Employers, once they have assessed the suitability of a person for the role of plant operator will then decide which route their candidate should follow i.e. novice operator, experienced operator requiring training or experienced operator requiring no training. An NPORS Accredited Training Provider (ATP) will complete a pre-assessment of the operator to determine the level of training required.
